of the cervical spine caused 'due to: degenerative changes

Etiology: Intervertebral disc desiccation

: Osteophyte formation

: compression of neural foramina and spinal cord rare leading to nerve root compression

Agg by Trauma, physical inactivity, occupational strain or due to genetic & Age related factors.

Pathophysiology: Degenerative cascade includes:

↳ loss of disc water content (proteoglycan loss).

↳ increased load on facet/uncovertebral joints

↳ Radiculopathy due to disc protrusion, compression of nerve root

Clinical features:

- Neck pain & stiffness (Axial stiffness during movement)

- Pain on extension & lateral motion

- cervical Radiculopathy i.e. electric or shooting pains from neck into arm

- Muscle weakness & diminished deep tendon reflexes

- Red flag symptoms (which need urgent attention)

↳ Bilateral symptoms

↳ Spinal cord signs (gait instability/ clumsiness)

↳ Fever, weight loss (possible infection/malignancy)

↳ Paralysis / Motor-sensory loss.

Role of investigations:

① MRI (may define disc herniation, nerve root compression & clinical correlation of symptoms).

② Electromyography & Nerve conduction study:

To confirm nerve root involvement

Complications:

Paresthesia, Numbness, tingling i.e. dermatomal distribution

Motor weakness along i.e. deep tendon reflex diminished

Cervical myelopathy (clumsiness of hands/spasticity)

- > Susceptibility —
- Nature of disease — low susceptibility ∴ low potency
 - Face/Appearance of disease — slow, gradual onset — low susceptibility ∴ low potency
 - Zone — structural pathology — low susceptibility ∴ low potency
 - Characteristic symptoms — some are prominent ∴ High susceptibility ∴ High potency
 - Mental picture — prominent totality — High susceptibility ∴ High potency
 - Life energy/Profile — moderate, middle age — moderate susceptibility
- ∴ Susceptibility is low.

- Diet and Regimen and Auxiliary management:
- Diet Recommended — calcium rich food — (milk, sesame seed, Ragi, almonds).
 - Vitamin D (^{sun} exposure)
 - Vit B12 rich food (green leafy vegetables, sprout, nuts). CS,

- Auxiliary management:
- Physiotherapeutic exercises (for cervical mobility and to reduce pain).
 - Heat therapy for muscular spasm.
 - Massage therapy.
 - Orthopedic mattress and pillows for proper spinal alignment.

- Role of Homoeopathy along with prognosis —
- Susceptibility, sensitivity and vitality of patient are moderate, Dis. has marked structural changes with irreversible pathology ∴ prognosis is guarded, Hom. medicines may provide symptomatic relief, But pathology cannot be reverted, so hom. has limited scope. Symptomatic relief may be achieved through help of Hom. medicines along with moderate physiotherapeutic exercises.

→ Scope of Homoeopathy:

According to the presenting complaints of patient, homoeopathy aids in reducing the character and intensity of pain along with stiffness and numbness as a result of nerve root compression.

→ Limitation of Homoeopathy -

As the disease presents with structural degenerative pathology homoeopathy has limited scope in such conditions. It can reduce the intensity of pain but not revert the pathology. Also, if there is progression of symptoms due to nerve root compression (e.g.) like severe & persistent radiculopathy associated with motor and sensory weakness with diminished reflexes along with cervical myelopathy, role of surgery comes into picture. In such cases, Homoeopathy has limited scope.
